Message Body:

The balancing of populations per district while keeping districts to near community wholeness is never easy and will always have critics. Still, we are counting on you.

Looking at http://c365736.r36.cf2.rackcdn.com/maps_20110610_q2_cd_social_nesan.pdf

I am concerned about the pinched forcedness around Del Mar, National City and Rancho Bernardo.

To me it still looks to be protecting some moneyed interests at the expense of enabling neighbors to have all their views brought to the voting booth.

Another comment earlier deserves repeating:

"Voters should choose their elected officials, not the other way around.

When politicians' electoral districts become safe, the public is put at great risk.

Competition is very healthy and vital for the preservation of effectively functioning representative democracy.

Keep each district geographically compact with a tight radius and none that look like string beans or lightning strikes.

Don't be partisan!"
