

Scanned
KIT,
4/27

9

- 04.16.11.E

San Joaquin County

Population	685306
Deviation	-17.599
% Deviation	-3%
Black	51,744
% Black	8%
Asian	98,472
% Asian	14%
Hispanic Origin	266,341
% Hispanic Origin	39%
LAT_CVAP_EST	46,229
% LAT_CVAP_EST	23%

Federally Compliant Southern Area

Due to federal law, the area south of San Joaquin County must meet certain population requirements.

This map will meet and exceed federal standards for the creation of State Senate, State Assembly, and Congressional Districts and allow San Joaquin County to be kept whole.

- According to the US Census Bureau's 2008 numbers, Stanislaus County has a population of 510,694 – which is roughly 1.4% of the State's population. Yet, this county is currently represented by 3 different Assembly Districts (AD 17, 25, 26), 2 State Senate Districts (SD 12, 14) and 2 Congressional Districts (CD 18, 19).
- These legislative lines have split cities, neighborhoods, and even neighbors. One prime example of lines splitting a city in two: Rose Avenue in Modesto. 1143 Rose Avenue is in the 18th Congressional District. 1140 Rose Avenue is in the 19th Congressional District.
- Students attending Rose Avenue Elementary School in Modesto may live across the street from the school...but live in a completely different Congressional District.
- In San Joaquin County the picture is even more grim. A county with a population of 672,388 (according to 2008 Census numbers) – does not have a SINGLE state or federal legislator who lives in the county.
- The 11th Congressional District is both a bay area and central valley seat. This Congressional seat represents cities whose median incomes range from $36,000 (Stockton) to $96,000 (San Ramon) per year (2000 Census).
- In Stockton, while traveling east in a 10,000 foot long stretch of delta inlet, the left side of the water changes congressional districts three times.