Perhaps, Latino groups might consider bringing their own translator.....since we are dealing with limited dollars available and these are tax dollars being expended they might assist by being self-sufficient and assisting in the effort to draw reasonable lines. We are all in this together and it takes work and sacrifice by each of us to make this process successful. Additionally, there are other languages that may be require translation in other areas other than Spanish.....

How about we all do some of the work and providing a translator for their group is not an unreasonable request.
