
Subject: Public Comment: Redistricting process

Date: Thursday, May 19, 2011 8:15 PM

From: Waldemar Kalinowski <[REDACTED]>

To: <[REDACTED]>

Conversation: Public Comment: Redistricting process

From: Waldemar Kalinowski <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Redistricting process

Message Body:

There is no way an average citizen can participate in the redistricting process. The information provided on the commission's website is inadequate, confusing and prevents input from individuals and maybe even whole communities. The commission is "welcoming" comments by may 23rd, but will release its redistricting plans on July 7th. How can a citizen participate in this process if she or he does not know all along what the commission is planing? Citizens of California can intelligently comment on the commission's proposals only if these plans are clearly spelled out and updated whenever any and all changes are made. For those of us who are still lucky enough to be employed, it is impossible to attend commission's sessions or hearings. That is why a clearly spelled out plan and process of the commission is essential on its website.

--

This mail is sent via contact form on Citizens Redistricting Commission