Message Body:

I know others have touched on the importance of the entertainment industry and industry workforce having a voice in state issues. I wish to emphasize the point: as you are looking for logical parts of town to unite in a district, you really should keep the "Hollywoods" together. I'm talking the areas that account for most of the film and television production and the areas where, concomitantly, as many of 1/5 of the citizens work in the industry.

Hollywood (not just for its symbolic importance), the Hollywood Hills (including Hollywood Knoll, the Oaks, etc.), North Hollywood (large number of post-production firms and entertainment-dependent businesses), Burbank (home of countless studios), Universal City (home to a huge entertainment studio and complex) and the apt-named and adjacent Studio City should all be in the same district.

That's our rallying cry, and it's easy to remember: keep the "Hollywoods" together!
