To the members of the commission:

I am a long-time resident of Marin County; I moved there from San Francisco in about 1979.

Having lived in both places, I can't imagine Marin county being redistricted to be linked with San Francisco, because they are so completely different. They differ in population make-up, density, economics, and lifestyle, just to name a few of the most obvious differences.

Marin county should be linked with Sonoma because of their obvious similarities. Both are family-oriented, suburban, offer many outdoor activities and include a significant rural area. Both are the antithesis of San Francisco.

Thank you for your consideration.
