This morning, I discussed the full agenda with Dan, Kirk, Rob, and Janeece, with respect to the sequence for this entire week. I would not recommend releasing the revised Pico-Rivera district. It not only does not resolve the Voting Rights Act concerns, but results in two districts (Pico-Rivera and South Gate-Lakewood), which will raise substantial concerns regarding their compliance with the compactness criterion.

the statewide files are merged, the equivalency files were already delivered and the pdfs are being made. this is not something that can be changed today. as we noted weeks ago, no changes can be made today. if the commission wants the previous districts presented then the release date for the draft maps has to be cancelled for tomorrow.

Hi George,

Thanks for getting back to us on this visualization.

As I noted in my email yesterday afternoon, we attempted to rework this area while maintaining the integrity of city boundaries to the extent possible, per CRC direction to see whether adjustment to the very high LCVAP district was possible.

I am not sure if you are suggesting making any changes now, but I wanted to let you know that at this late point we cannot make further changes and still deliver draft maps for tomorrow.

Thanks,

I think the issues in region 6 are inextricably tied to Section 5 counties. I think we would want legal opinions on whether any of the public proposals are not viable based on retrogression. Can you get George to look at that before Thursday? I don't want to "waste" our limited Commission discussion time. Also, can we get feedback on how we dealt with Yuba in region 9?

Our total budget for this work is $50,000. If the work is done in the manner you propose, I do not think we reach an agreement. The work will be performed for outside counsel, but not litigation. I encourage you to call George Brown in the morning and discuss specifically our needs. Please let me know if you still feel there is a match, and the work can be done within our budget, as we would like to conclude this matter this week. Best wishes. Kirk

On Wed, Jun 8, 2011 at 7:33 PM, Matt Barreto <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Hi Kirk,

I am happy to provide independent advice throughout this process, though the role of the expert who is acting on behalf of CA should be to provide an independent assessment of the data, not to review what someone else has done. The only way I can say with certainty if some data are accurate or not, is to run the data myself. Someone could produce a set of results that is nothing more than tables and charts, and unless we replicate all of their work we will never have the ability to say if they are accurate or not, and the extent to which RPB exists or doesn't. I would not be comfortable looking at a report someone else wrote and then telling the CRC, with certainty that X or Y exists. It could very well be the case that everything is accurate, but my own experience suggests that different methods and modes of research and data compilation lead to very different results. Researchers make mistakes all the time, and that is why the CRC should have their own independent expert to run data and figure out what the actual answer is in each case. Still, I could look at other empirical data that is being reported and say something like, "the authors of the report claim that they have found ABC." The only way I will ever say with certainty that X or Y does or doesn't exist, is if I compile the dataset and run the analysis myself.

Hope this helps,
MB

Matt,

Please see this note from George Brown that better decides the work. Let me know how this might change your response and estimated cost:

We want to work with the consultant to help us assess the likelihood that a plaintiff in a section 2 case could develop RPV evidence in a particular area. The work to be done will vary by area. In Los Angeles County, we may want the consultant to help assess the empirical data that already exists concerning RPV among various groups and to discuss with us the implications of that data. In Fresno, we may want the consultant to do a bivariate regression analysis of a few elections, sufficient for counsel to form a judgment about the likelihood that further evidence on RPV could be developed if the matter were litigated. I do not envision any written reports or conclusions.

Kirk,

Below I've included a general overview to the research for racially polarized voting analysis that I regularly perform. Please let me know if you have any questions, or need more detail.

Best,

Racial Bloc Voting Research - Prof. Matt A. Barreto

The central question to be examined in racial bloc voting research is whether or not distinct voting patterns exist when a racial or ethnic minority candidate appears on the ballot. That is, in the presence of a minority candidate, do minorities and Whites in a given jurisdiction show different, and racially polarized, patterns of vote choice. For any one jurisdiction, or case, in which RBV is to be considered, we would expect to analyze about 10 previous elections in order to establish enough evidence that a pattern does, or does not exist. In some cases there may only be 6 to 8 previous election, while in other cases, there may be 15 or 20 previous elections to consider. We base this cost estimate on an average of 10 elections to be analyzed across all cases, and if in fact considerably more elections are needed to analyze, additional labor would be required to compile databases and conduct analysis. Because individual level vote choice data is not available, RBV researchers rely on precinct level data. To build a database for each analysis, we would first download the election results, precinct-by-precinct, for the election with a minority candidate, and we would merge this against precinct level information on the minority population within each precinct. Where possible, we prefer to use the minority population of actual voters, which is usually discernible for Latino and Asian American populations. For African Americans, voter registration records are less reliable and census citizen voting age population data is often used as a proxy. In each case, we would create a unique and independent database for each election year to be analyzed. For example, if we are analyzing voting patterns during elections with Latino candidates, and Latino candidates ran for office in the 2002 primary, 2002 general, 2006 primary, 2006 general, 2010 primary, 2010 general, we would end up needing to compile six independent databases, so that vote results for each each match voter population estimates for each year. Once the databases are compiled and validated, that RBV analysis begins. To provide the most comprehensive research possible, we rely on six different statistical methods of analysis to assess the degree to which racially polarized voting exists, or doesn't exist. These include, (1) pairwise correlation; (2) T-test comparison of means; (3) Homogeneous precinct analysis; (4) XY scatterplot with fitted line; (5) Goodman's ecological regression; (6) King's ecological inference. It is absolutely critical that the researcher takes the most comprehensive and rigorous approach to the data analysis as possible, which will result in slightly more research being needed, but will allow us to draw conclusions that are extremely accurate and scientifically supported.

To conduct a thorough and rigorous analysis of RBV in a given jurisdiction requires about 60 hours of work. The most efficient, and economical way to proceed is to divide the work between the principal researcher (Barreto) and two research assistants. RAs can assist with the downloading and compiling of databases, which the principal researcher can validate. RAs can also assist with the preliminary statistical analysis, which the principal researcher can confirm, re-estimate and validate.

20 Hours RA 1 @ $50.....	$1000
20 Hours RA 2 @ $50.....	$1000
20 Hours Principal @ $250.....	$5000
Total cost per jurisdiction.....	$7000

If more than 10 previous elections are required for analysis, additional labor would be required on our part to compile the databases and analyze RBV, bringing additional costs, however we would only charge those is the overall average number of previous elections exceeds 10. For example if jurisdiction A had 13 previous elections; but jurisdiction B had 7, the average would be 10 and no additional labor or costs would be incurred. For each additional election required to compile and analyze, beyond the average of 10, costs would be pro-rated at the same rates above, or $700 per additional election.

In addition to RBV, some cases may require additional types of research such as population analysis to determine whether or not a large and cohesive minority population does in fact exist to create a viable majority-minority district. This would entail reviewing the population data, already provided, and to assess the potential voting population, given the degree or rate of RBV found in the above analysis. The size of the minority population should not be viewed in isolation, but rather in combination with the degree of RBV. The need for population analysis could be determined on an ad hoc basis and would require about 15 additional hours per case:

5 Hours RA 1 @ $50..... $250
5 Hours RA 2 @ $50..... $250
5 Hours Principal @ $250..... $1250

Lonni...what follows all relate to Pra 15 Item 3. These are more related to what we were doing than the decision to delegate us to work with Q2.

On Wed, Jun 22, 2011 at 8:25 PM, Ancheta, Angelo <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Maria -- Here's an update on the progress of the VRA work team. Connie, Vince, and I have been tag teaming on various districts, and we've been able to complete our comparisons of alternatives for the congressional districts and for the assembly and senate districts outside of the core-LA-county areas. We will still need to complete our analyses of the LA County assembly and senate districts.

A couple of patterns of emerged. First, in many areas, the CRC maps align closely with various alternative proposals, and we would not recommend any significant changes to the draft. Second, in some areas, a couple of alternative districts are problematic because they have serious compactness problems and might lead to Shaw violations under the 14th amendment if adopted. Third, based on comparisons and some line drawing with Q2, there appear to be additional majority-minority districts that could be drawn in some areas. For example, one more majority-minority congressional district could be drawn in the LA core area and one district could be drawn in Orange County (majority-minority district on the assembly level, influence district on the congressional level).

There are, of course, ripple effects that the Commission will need to address, and we have attempted to map some of the adjacent districts to make sure that the majority-minority districts are viable. We've also made sure the public testimony on COIs and neighborhoods aligns with the potential districts. Q2 has saved visualizations and can present them on Friday.

For Thursday's meeting, I can provide a basic progress progress report during the work plan discussion. On Friday morning, we can present a more thorough report with specific visualizations and Q2 present. If you'd like more extensive coverage on Thursday to help the commissioner teams working on regions (this assumes they have time to work on Thursday night and Friday morning between meetings), then I can offer more specifics, but will not have visuals available.

Mr. Brown,

Attached please find visualizations for the following potential VRA districts:

1. San Diego City AD. As I had surmised in my email last night, the changes to this district did increase the LCVAP slightly.
2. Pomona Valley CDs Option 1. This option has one district that is greater than 50% LCVAP. This district is centered on San Bernardino.
3. Pomona Valley CDs Option 2. The CRC directed us to attempt to draw two CDs in the Pomona Valley with greater than 50% LCVAP. This file contains these visualizations.

Please feel free to contact me with any questions.

Take care,

Ana

Hi Christina,

There are two CDF folders and two SHP folders. One of each is zipped. I wasn't sure which one you wanted, so I included both, but they are exactly the same otherwise.

Commissioners:

Although there are still a couple of technical issues being worked out by Q2 for general presentation purposes and interaction with Google Maps, the Northern California visualizations are available now and can be viewed if you have Google Earth loaded on your computer.

First, if you don't already have a copy of Google Earth, you should download and set up the program. The program is available for download at <http://earth.google.com>

The visualization files can be downloaded at http://swbdb.berkeley.edu/crc_vis/index.html

When you go the appropriate page that has the downloadable files, you should do the following:

1. Click on the ".kmz" link under the FILE TYPE section
2. Downloading will begin and, depending on your browser, you will be prompted to save the file or to load it into Google Earth. If the file is saved, just double-click on it and it should bring up Google Earth
3. After Google Earth loads, you can opt to turn on various layers in the lower left part of the screen. Use the "Roads" layer to have highways and street names available.
4. Zoom in and out as needed to view the district
5. Click your mouse pointer within a district to pull up the district name and some basic data on the district
6. Printing of the current view should be available within program.

We'll provide updates as the technical issues are being smoothed out. We certainly want to make sure that the general public will be able to access the visualizations easily.

As you prepare for the line drawing meetings, please look at the districts carefully and go down to the street level as needed. Knowing the districts and focusing on your major concerns ahead of time will help in making the line drawing sessions more efficient.

Let me know if you encounter any problems.

Sacramento Redistricting Workshop Open to the Public

Redistricting Technical Assistance Centers to Open Statewide

SACRAMENTO—The Redistricting Group at the University of California Berkeley School of Law is hosting a series of interactive, educational workshops and opening regional redistricting technical assistance centers (also called ‘sites’) across the State. Paid for by a grant from the James Irvine Foundation, the purpose of the workshops is to educate all Californians on how the redistricting process works, how to access the data, and how to effectively communicate valuable information about your community.

The first of these workshops will be held at the Sacramento Central Library. The workshop is free and open to the public. This is your opportunity to become an informed California resident equipped with the tools necessary to be a part of this important process.

Hi Karin,

I don't have Anna's email, but it's better that I send you these questions regarding the senate district lines for San Diego. Jeanne and I will be sending some suggestions by tonight or tomorrow morning for Anna to play around with.

Currently, San Diego County has 7 assembly districts (odd number). Here are some over-arching questions that will help us:

Scenario A:

What happens to the distribution if we compressed the number of senate districts in the county to 3 senate districts?

- a) If we combined two coastal assembly districts (NCSAND & CRNOSAND) into one senate district?
- b) If we combined LMSAND and SSAND into one senate district?
- c) If we combined NESAND and SANTM into one senate district?
- d) Blend RCHMM into the each of the three above senate districts?

How do we handle the overflow of 465,000 from RCHMM?

Can we re-distribute the numbers in some equitable way?

What are our boundary options?

Scenario B:

2) What happens to the distribution if we expand the number of senate districts to 4 senate districts? Where do we pick up an additional 465,000 populace to make-up a full senate district?

- a) keep LMSAND and SSAND together?
- b) keep NCSAND & CRNOSAND together?
- c) keep SANTM and RCHMM together?
- d) Can NESAND expand into southern Imperial County (El Centro area)? What's the impact to Coachella Valley above?
