Message Body:

I would like to add to my email sent a couple minutes ago. I have lived in Siskiyou County my entire life. I have owned businesses here, and presently the manager at the Yreka Elk's Lodge. Because of this, I have scheduled several events. I have, also, been the chair of several fund raising events for different reasons. The people of Scott Valley attend and support the events and businesses in Yreka and all of Siskiyou County. Several of the people living in the Scott Valley area, where this redistricting is about, have jobs in Yreka. Why, then, would they have representation from the same people over on the coast? Are you sure the people making this decision are aware that Yreka and Eureka are not the same city. Yreka and Scott Valley are inland, close to I-5. Eureka is a coastal city. Two different cultures and issues.

Sincerely,

Rebecca Phillipe

Subject: Splitting Siskiyou County in Redistricting in 2011

Message Body:

Committee:

Siskiyou County is very small, rural county in Northern California with a population less than 50,000. Not only will supervisorial districts, school districts and fire protecting districts be split into two governing areas, but it would divide a county that has similar interests. Our interests are more in line with the rural counties of Modoc, Lassen, Plumas and Sierra counties than with the coastal areas.

Please keep Siskiyou County in tact and aligned with the rural mountain counties in Northern California.

Subject: redistrict

Message Body:

Why would people in San Diego be meeting to decide on changing the district lines up in the TRUE Northern California? This is insane. Every time we turn around here in Siskiyou County, people are taking more away from us. It effects every part of our lives. Our children can't even grow up and stay here, because people have made so many decisions about this area who live from Sacramento & San Francisco south. I would guess that almost all the people making these decisions have never come this far north, visiting with the citizens, to see how they will effect our lives. Please do something to change this decision. The people over on the coast of California and the people inland in Siskiyou County have differen issues to be decided on, and really have nothing in common in that respect. Again, I ask you to please reconsider this. We need the proper representation in our area. Someone who knows the area and the people. I believe this is just another way for political !

divide and conquer tactics. The people in the Scott Valley area of Siskiyou County do not belong in the same district as those over on the coast.

Sincerely,

Rebecca Phillipe
