Subject: Splitting small towns

Message Body:

I recently found out that a few small blocks of area where I live in Woodland is actually not part of Mike Thompson's district. Mr. Thompson's office is in Woodland, mere blocks from my home, his office has always helped me, and yet I come to find out my section of town actually belongs to Wally Herger in Redding. Why would a small area of a small city be separated like this? My interests are best served by having the same representation as the rest of Woodland, not being only a small handful of homes split off and being lumped by someone from 2 hours away, with much different problems and goals. Please take these sorts of things into consideration as you make this important decision. Subdividing LA, maybe, but something the size of Woodland? Not right!
