Provide support to CBOs to hold community events, celebrations, where people discuss community of interest and submit COI.	Train trusted community members to help give presentations and training to other community members.	provide examples of a wide array of COI submissions	Take advantage of partners, the press, job and letters to help bring on the COI tool. They can help spread the word and provide feedback on what works and doesn't work.	Place advertisements on social media and news outlets. Engage influencers.	Paid Social Media ads in targeted areas.
Provide the CBO tools to share at their events	Give trained community members tools for outreach (social media, paper forms)	include examples on social media	CRC could help promote partner trainings to the public	This is similar to the idea that I had. Social media is a great tool that we can use for our purposes.
provide materials CBOs can easily add to their own communications, and provide materials in multiple languages	Have training tools on CRC Website and downloadable paper form.	Provide examples of COI in a wide range of formats-video narrative, online tool, map examples, narrative-only examples	include partner trainings on the CRC outreach page	engage various populations to interact with ads in different ways, ie youth, business centers	I think there are a lot of ways to engage people on social media to promote meetings, COI tool, other engagements.
yes	story telling for framing COI	Develop trainings that organizations & community leaders can adapt to their own community, address local needs, local examples	target areas that rely on newspapers and hyper local news sources, e.g. rural areas
Make the COI tool mobile friendly so that community outreach workers can submit COIs at their events, and submit them on behalf of the public.	Ensure materials are translated effectively		Commissioner's appear on social media appearances (e.g. Facebook live)	incorporate other ideas around examples of COI input along with other engagement opportunities.
This exercise is an example of how some people benefit more from a technology-driven input process than others.	Also work with the existing local redistricting communications materials and have them message the same COI in the same track.		Train the trainer model can maximize our outreach efforts.	In rural communities place ads or letters to the editor in small local newspapers or other publications	Create translated social media tool - both in Spanish and English, and folks who might feel more engaged seeing their language included
	Using examples is powerful - we would have some COI form examples in our presentations.		Have users of social media help promote CRC.	If placing ads in rural areas, consider the fact that some people may not have internet access, so consider alternative ways to reach them.

Use resources to help ID translation support to help the LEP participate in hearings	Create the chart that defines things of importance at each level - state level vs local	Have in person meetings across the state to prepare for public input sessions.	Create PSAs	Provide training to others to get out with us. Create formal responsibilities or incentives for reaching a certain number of folks/areas?	Teatro popular
Find tools resources for folks to self identify.	Chart/materials that help explain a local COI might be different than a state COI	ensure in person meetings are in a set mile radius that is equitable.	Begin to incorporate a live COI tool filing our session to presentations where folks pull out their phone and fill it out.		Creating Music Video
What does LEP stand for? LEP: Limited English Proficiency	Ad a key of which elected affected which area. For example, city maintain your streets.	Work to create welcoming climate at in person hearings, come engage in spirit, and come ready to be able to offer.	Take input from participants and use their actual COI info.	Have a live session with news outlets where they fill out the form	Slam Poerty
Make sure this is promoted in online courses but also in in-language newspapers and radio as well.	This is great idea. Perhaps the chart could help identify which level of government is most important at each level of government. Additionally, we could have a list of redistricting impacts people directly.	We'd like to do a great in person meetings, but we'd like to have people who would have alternative ways to submit.	All COI sessions, if you're using an example, highlight an issue that someone in your community struggles to share how some neighbors can disagree	Shout out on our website listing locations that are sending folks to input COI.	Send outreach workers out with ipads to fill out COIs on the spot
	I like the idea to make sure of why redistricting is important to individual and COIs and how it impacts them.	Have a balance for in person and virtual. This way people have options.	Create sample COI inputs on our CRC website to illustrate what could be included.	redistricting for the media provide specific granular examples of how each level of redistricting impacts people directly.		Have digital signs to the COI tool as in person meetings for area of data collection and to systematize the process.	List of coalitions on CRC website	Trouble with sending out people with iPads are that it does not get a collaborative COI; just an individual input
	Publicize at a Market District / Election at a water district / Campaign at a school district / Military installations at a Federal level, etc...		Be competitive to other for getting "redistricting" attention to be included. Look at DDP work to have their own COI meetings and gather evidence to send to the agency.

Use Radio to access remote areas of the state

Paul	Jane	James	Neal	Jaime	Alvaro
Use an organization that already has a strong presence in the community - for example, a local church or community center - to help spread the word and provide feedback on what works and doesn't work.	Use radio to access remote areas of the state	Engage in person meetings across the state to prepare for public input sessions.	Place paper COI forms in each library in the state to make sure that those who can't access the Commission's information	Engage a team through CRC website where people can create questions about the process (including the timeline of the COI) and submit them directly.	Useful and easy online tool. COI Tool or other.
Display the information provided by the organizations and include on CRC website.	Radio is a good way to reach people in rural areas. We need to be able to reach people in rural areas. We need to be able to reach people in rural areas.	Teach "how to" on the COI Tool	Connect with library associations or groups in rural areas to make sure that people in those areas are getting the information they need.	This should then go through the State Management process to be input into the COI tool so it can be easily accessed during the mapping phase	Make it as easy as possible to use. Make it as easy as possible to use. Make it as easy as possible to use.
Great idea. This is what we have discussed in the past and should take into further account once we receive the census data.	Get on radio shows	Totally agree with this one.	Over the commission agree that COI should be included in the commission's website. The commission should have a way for folks to be able to see the information they need to see.	Ensure this input is tagged in a way that can be easily accessed
	Very effective form of communication for rural areas as well as ethnic groups.		Have a library for submitting paper COI submissions. This is a great idea. This is a great idea. This is a great idea.	Ensure that the public has access and can easily search through the input as well.
How many COI submissions do we have at the moment? Have a count on CRC website?	Rural area: put paper COI in utility bills w/instructions	This is a great idea. This is a great idea. This is a great idea.	create a companion activity that goes with the COI paper tool	Example of this in Burlington mentioned in Neal's
Invite video commercials of COI stories to be submitted and displayed on the website.		in person meetings in the facilities	Agree with this but also provide training to the library personnel.		Easy to use mapping and form type submissions. And make sure this is supporting, not replacing public testimony.
yes and name them for people not everyone knows their community might not be represented in the Census
